The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 19-27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Shimizu et al (JP 01-181751) in view of Staub et al (US 4304768).

Shimizu et al (JP 01-181751) disclose a honey composition and process comprising mixing honey with 10% to 40% oligosaccharide then sterilizing the honey composition at 120°C to 140°C (see abstract).

The claimed viscosity would be an obvious characteristic of the honey composition as the same components and process steps are used.

The claims differ with respect to the use of other extender molecules.

Staub et al (US 4304768) disclose the use of polysaccharides and polyols in combination with dietary fiber as a substitute for sucrose (see columns 1 and 2).

It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to use polyols, polysaccharides, or dietary fiber in lieu of the oligosaccharides of Shimizu et al because polyols, polysaccharides, and dietary fiber are conventional substitutes for sweeteners such as honey.

Applicant's arguments filed April 16, 2007 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues that Shimizu et al do not teach a natural honey.

Applicant does not exclude the process steps of Shimizu et al. Shimizu et al start with a natural honey. Furthermore, Applicant does not attach criticality to the source or state of the honey.

In the absence of unexpected results, it is not seen how the claimed invention differs from the teachings of the prior art. Applicant's claims are drawn to a combination of known components, which produces expected results.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
